The Dynamics of the Parent/Child Relationship: The Effects on One's Life Dr. Calvert Moore

The need to examine the dynamics of the parent/child relationship is nothing new. We may be in a new generation but the various dynamics that make up the parent/child relationship is the same as they have always been. The parent and the child are each individuals and sometimes navigating through the parent/child relationship can be rather rocky. My name is Dr. Calvert Moore and I have had a chance to witness many different types of parent/child relationships and the lasting effects it can have on one's life. The views and subjects discussed in this book are solely my own. By having had a chance to work with children and their parents, it became clear to me that there is sometimes a disconnect that causes the child and/or the parent to experience unnecessary hardships that could have possibly been avoided if the parent/child relationship was given the attention that it needed. Just as any other relationship, the parent/child relationship requires work and attention. I wrote this book so not only the parent and the child can learn about one another but they can also take time to reflect on themselves. While reading this book you may find that some topics do not pertain to both the parent and the child but please continue to read on as you will obtain clarity as you near the conclusion. Remember, everyone's situation is different and some of the information may not always apply directly to you.
