Charles Manson and the Manson Family: A Mineography David Batterson

Responsible for the Tate - La Bianca murder spree over a two-night span back in 1969, the Manson family quickly became embroiled in media attention. Charles Manson, Charles 'Tex' Watson, Susan 'Sexy Sadie' Atkins, Leslie Van Houghten, Patricia Kremwinkel and Linda Kasabian, as well as Paul Watkins; all members of the infamous Manson Family would soon become household names.

Charles Manson... some would call him brilliant. Brilliant for having had the ability to brainwash those who would later become infamously known all over the world as the Manson Family, and coerce them into committing some of the most brutal slayings in modern times. Charles Manson is a sociopath, a psychopath. But brilliant? I think not. As a matter of fact, there is nothing at all brilliant about the man.

Murder is one of the most brutal crimes anyone could ever commit, a crime for which could lead to decades behind bars, a life sentence, or the death penalty for the person responsible – if and when they are caught. Murder is a crime of intention, and often times it is premeditated, resulting in the untimely death of the innocent. This crime falls under the category of criminal homicide. Based on both federal and state laws, murder and homicide are considered among the most complex of criminal behaviors.

The reason that certain people commit murder has long been the subject of intense debate and extreme controversy. Investigators often find themselves clueless when investigating the motivation behind certain murders, and what drives one person to kill another. They wonder if the person has a conscience, or even feels badly for their actions. However, despite the fact that there is a single victim model, there are also individuals who are capable of killing not just once, but multiple times. Some would say that once a person has killed without any legal justification, and without remorse, he is without a soul, and often times they don't believe their actions to be wrong. This is the basic mindset of a murderer, a serial killer, and a mass murderer.

Most normal people are shocked and become deeply affected when a murder is committed in their town or neighborhood, especially if the victim is an acquaintance, a close friend or a relative. And so the search for justice begins, and when a suspect is tried and convicted, often times they will plea for forgiveness, and throw themselves at the mercy of the court. However the facts are, that once the evidence is presented and the suspect(s) have been sentenced to death or to a life behind bars, it will never change the reality that the lives affected, can never be fully righted, and the relatives and friends of the victim(s) must accept this fact and desperately try to move on with their lives.

Charles Miles Maddox, aka Charlie Manson. This is the story of Charles Manson, the man, and his infamous murder family, aka The Manson Family.
