Rachel Ann Stallworth

If you have experience rejection, discrimination and harassment this book is for you. The author uses real talk to motivate readers as she address discrimination and pursues purpose from a woman's perspective. This book offers help, hope and empowerment to others. It is a classic example of courage, tenacious faith and an unbelievable struggle with discrimination, slander and harassment that she and countless other Americans are receiving in the workplace. As the story is told readers will empathize through "Perspective Taking," the ability to feel the emotions and feelings of someone else. It will unlock life and purpose in the heart of everyone who reads it. Stallworth declares, society has a different standard for the acceptance of women base on the color of their skin. She compares the approach First Lady Michelle Obama receives to that of former first ladies like Mrs. Hillary Clinton and Mrs. Nancy Reagan and more. The quality of God is on the inside of every virtuous woman and is awaiting to come out.
