Essential Oils have been used for hundreds and hundreds of years for their soothing fragrances and cosmetic properties, dating back at least to ancient Egypt where frankincense was turning into incense. They can be used as flavoring agents in foods, aromatherapy, medical treatments, and a host of other purposes.

A wide variety of essential oils are known to be antibacterial, antiseptic, antiviral, antispasmodic, anti-inflammatory, anti-cancer, anti-tumor, and much more. They can be used to treat your digestive system, cardiovascular system, respiratory system, nervous system, and even your emotional state.
