Since the dawn of civilization, human beings have recognized and responded to the pull of sacred ground. It is an intrigue that transcends all boundaries of religion, ethnicity and geography. All cultures of the world have sacred places, as diverse as the societies that sanctify them, where people encounter and commune with the divine. It may be a house of worship or a place in nature. It may be sacred by virtue of its natural properties or made so through ritual and tradition. The 2014 On Sacred Ground wall calendar pays homage to the holy ground of the worlds great religions. From a remote Buddhist monastery clinging to the cliffs of Bhutan to the colorful vaulted ceilings of a nineteenth-century mosque, each month you will be transported to a mystical site where spirit dwells. However divergent, all religions have a common ground in sacred ground, in the practice of consecrating places for spiritual awakening and building monuments in praise of the divine.
